

Mini Mayor Script – by Jillian Chau

Good day Toronto! My name is Jillian Chau and I am running to be your 2023 mayor. Toronto has many good aspects, but that doesn't mean that we ignore the things that need improvement. Today, I am going to focus on topics that are important to improving Toronto so we can thrive as a community. The two most important topics to me, and I believe the people of Toronto are: school funding and housing prices.

Firstly, I think school funding is something important because it can affect students' education. Schools need more teachers so students can learn important skills that will help them get a good job when they are older. So, if I become mayor, I will give schools more funding and try to make sure that every school gives students a good education. I will also hire more teachers to give students more education. For example, if a teacher is away, instead of another teacher filling in and missing their classes, I will make sure that there will always be a supply teacher available. Also, some kids don't enjoy school very much because of many reasons. The most common reason is that kids lack interest in subjects such as math or history. If I become mayor, I will try to make sure that kids enjoy what they are learning. It also depends on how the teacher teaches the subject. If they give boring lectures that go on and on, then children tend to dislike class. But if the teacher gives them hands-on experiences and make it fun, then kids will enjoy class more. For example, schools can do more workshops where other teachers can come and teach the kids from a different perspective. Also, I will try to make sure that schools arrange more field trips to fun places. Most kids enjoy field trips and I think that it would make them a lot more eager to learn.

Secondly, I think that house pricing is very important because I think that a house is mandatory whether you are rich or poor. People need shelter and somewhere to live. Since the Pandemic in 2021, people have been selling houses for over $1.378M. In my opinion, I think that that is a lot of money to pay for something that is necessary. So, if I become mayor, I will try to decrease the payment of houses. I will also make the price of houses all the same. And I will try to make sure that families with more people can live in bigger houses and families with not so many people can live in not so big houses. It is because if you live by yourself in a mansion, and another family is living in a small apartment, then the family should get the mansion because they have more people. Also, I will build more homeless shelters for the homeless people so that they don't have to suffer from the cold or from storms. That way, everyone can be happy and won't have to worry about house pricing.

So, in conclusion, I am running to be your Toronto mayor, and I think that there are two things that should be corrected: School funding and house pricing. If you agree with me, then you should vote for Jillian Chau!
